The Mexican Minister to the U. States Gives Out Some Information.

White Metal.

Washington, February 25 .- Important and interesting information as to nor Romero, the Mexican Minister to the United States.

In response to inquiries from a representative of the United Press, who called his attention to published statement that England, Germany and France, were about to take the initia tive in calling a new monetary confer ence, to consider the silver question Mr. Romero said:

"The secretary of the treasury of the Mexican government informed me by a personal letter dated January 19, 1894, that according to private advices the German government was leaning towards a policy regarding silver which would prove favorable to that metal, and that it was almost sure that the international conference would convene again with better chances of favorable results. As long as the United States or any of the commer cial nations of Europe took steps to promote the interests of silver, it be comes the Latin-American nation using that metal as money to keep the background and follow the lead of

The only material of which they ever have a complete suit is fishskin. Such a suit is sometimes elaborately though coarsely embroidered. The resemblance between this embroidery and that of the North American Indians is remarkable.

Curious comments by a judge, even in tremely rare, are not unprecedented. Mr. Justice Maule once addressed a phein the following words: "Prisoner at the bar, your counsel thinks you innocent; the counsel for the prosecution thinks you innocent; I think you innocent. But a jury of your own countrymen, in the exercise of such common sense as they have found you guilty, and it remains that I shall pass upon you the sentence kept in imprisonment for one day, and as that day was yesterday you may now go about your business."

WHEN FRUIT FREEZES.

The late Professor Newberry of Co-lumbia college, New York, showed scientifically some years ago how oranges and apples are able to resist frost to an unusual degree. His explanation is es-

The professor showed that it is a law of crystallization or freezing or solidifying that this process depends upon sev-eral conditions of the liquid to be crys-tallized or frozen, by which is meant simply that the liquid is changed into a solid. The effect of evaporation has much to do with it, as this itself reduces the temperature of liquid to a considerable extent, es may be discovered by any person wh will pour a little ether in his hand and blow upon it, when the greatly increased frozen by exposing it in porous jars to the cold night winds when the temperature of the air is several degrees above

Ice may be formed in a redhot crucible by the sudden evaporation of liquid carbonic acid or in a saucer under the receiver of an airpump by the evaporation of it and the rapid absorption of the va-por that escapes by reason of the reduced pressure by sulphuric acid in another Again, solutions of various substances

s sugar and crystallized salts, will not eze at the ordinary temperature at which ice is formed in pure water. Thus a solution of salt requires a lower temperature to become frozen than fresh water does, and it is well known that sugar sirup can hardly be frozen at any ordinary temperature. Further, the tension under which liquids are held has an effect in the same way. A light tension makes freezing easier, while a high one retards the congelation.

Now, all these facts have a bearing in the case of oranges and other fruits, as well as the sap of trees. Watery sap of come to me to learn how the gum was made, and I gave him the information very succulent plants freezes much more easily than the sweet and dense sap of the maple or the hickory. Some buds will resist freezing quite stubbornly at a very low temperature, and the re those of the horse chestnut, exert a great of water dropped on to his hand, drop resistance to freezing.

The sap or juice of the orange contains a large quantity of citric acid in solu tion, and a low temperature is required to congeal such a solution. It also contemperature is required the man's hand and in less than three tains considerable sugar, and this tends to resist cold. The sap or juice, which exists in this fruit in the proportion of 78 per cent in the orange, is under considerable tension, and this exerts some resistance to freezing, and finally the sap is not exposed to evaporation because of its tight covering by which it is Thus an orange must be exposed to a lower temperature than the ordinary freezing point of water before it will his reason, a statement nobody present freeze. The same applies to other fruits, seemed qualified or anxious to contraas apples and vegetables and potatoes, to some extent.—Pomona (Cal.) Progress.
